

Suppose end system A wants to send a large file to end system B. At a very high level, describe how end system A creates packets from the file. When one of these packets arrives at a packet switch, what information in the packet does the switch use to determine the link onto which the packet is forwarded?